

Marathoner BethAnn Telford helps demolish a York building to raise kids' cancer awareness

comments

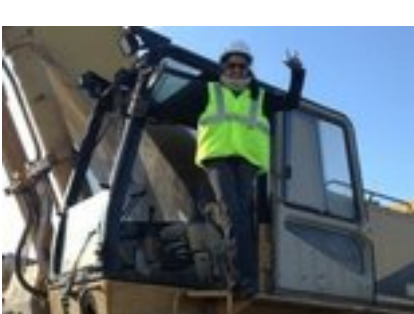

Marathoner and brain tumor survivor BethAnn Telford, left, helps demolish a building with Karen Bricker of New Cumberland, mother of Anya Zvorsky, a girl battling brain cancer. (BethAnn Telford)

By Barbara Miller | bmiller@pennlive.com
Email the author | Follow on Twitter
on December 30, 2013 at 1:09 PM, updated December 30, 2013 at 1:10 PM

Slamming a wrecking ball through a building might be an unusual way to fight cancer, but former Camp Hill resident BethAnn Telford's quest to battle pediatric cancer – as well as her own brain tumor – has been anything but traditional.

Telford, 44, a triathlete and marathoner who now lives in Fairfax, Va., for the past five years has raised a half-million dollars for research into pediatric cancer and brain tumors through the non-profit Accelerate Brain Cancer Cure.

"It's the number one cancer killer of kids age 20 and younger," she said. "And the NIH does not fund research on children," she said, referring to the National Institutes of Health. "They do it for my age – I don't think it's fair for the children."

View full size
BethAnn Telford aboard heavy equipment to demolish York building with words "Demolish Pediatric Cancer - Find a Cure Now!"
BethAnn Telford

The day after Christmas in York, Telford helped send a wrecking ball through the words "Demolish Pediatric Cancer – Find a Cure Now!" which she had spray-painted on the side of the former Danskin factory outlet at 300 N. State St. in York.

"It was definitely cool. I had to wear the hard hat, got to work the machinery. I could get some frustration out," Telford said.

She was pleased to have the mother of a New Cumberland girl battling a brain tumor join her – Karen Bricker, mother of Anya Zvorsky. The event was arranged through a friend of Telford, who works for a demolition company.

The demolition was the latest in her list of events raising money for Team BT, which supports Accelerate Brain Cancer Cure.

In San Diego Nov. 1, she rappelled down the 40-story Manchester Grand Hyatt San Diego - the tallest building on the waterfront - and raised $150,000.

"I wasn't scared at all – I did it for the children," Telford said. Two of the young cancer patients she's come to know were there, cheering her on. "They could relate to it more than me running, because it was a big building, and more like a superhero type thing," Telford said.

Among the 15 people also rappelling to raise money for brain cancer and tumors was American Idol winner David Cook, who lost a brother to brain cancer; and Bob Carter, chief of neurosurgery for the UC San Diego School of Medicine.

This week, Telford is in Johns Hopkins Medical Center for a week of tests, following a busy year raising funds for pediatric cancer.

Telford was diagnosed with an inoperable brain tumor in 2005, after hearing a loud popping noise in her head while running the Marine Corps Marathon the previous year.

Despite two brain surgeries and rounds of chemotherapy, she's been able to return to running marathons, including three Boston Marathons and three Ironman competitions, including the Ironman World Championship in Kona, Hawaii last year.

2013 was a year in which Telford had to take some time off after bladder surgery in February. Her tumor has caused neurological damage to her bladder, and she suffers from seizures.

But in October, Telford ran the Marine Corps Marathon and requalified for the Boston Marathon for 2015.

Even while in Johns Hopkins, Telford said she'll be continuing her efforts reaching out to pediatric cancer patients. "I hope to be mobile and visit kids and hang out with them if I can. I will be hooked up to monitors, but I hope to get out and see some of the kids," she said.

Telford is also looking forward to her signature race – the May 4 5K Race for Hope in Washington DC, which benefits the National Brain Tumor Society and Accelerate Brain Cancer Cure.

Featured Story

Newlyweds accused of Craigslist-luring murder could face the death penalty

... Read more»

Trending Videos

Most Comments Most Read

- 246 How do you climb the ladder of success when the bottom rungs have been removed? John L. Micek
- 211 Penn State football chat (or is it a Bill O'Brien chat) with Bob Flounders here Monday at noon
- 110 Don't be so quick to yank away the government's helping hand: PennLive letters
- 108 James Franklin is prime target in Penn State's sights -- if it can get to him soon enough
- 107 Here's who was really intolerant in the 'Duck Dynasty' flap Jerry Shenk

See more comments »

Get 'Today's Front Page' in your inbox

This newsletter is sent every morning at 6 a.m. and includes the morning's top stories, a full list of obituaries, links to comics and puzzles and the most recent news, sports and entertainment headlines.

Enter your e-mail address  OPTIONAL Enter Zip

Submit

Check here if you do not want to receive additional email offers and information.

See our privacy policy

Related Stories

Give a pint of blood and get a pound of coffee

Mechanicsburg Borough Council approves 0.5 mill fire tax, 2014 budget

Best of PennLive.com

With Bill O'Brien gone, what's next for PSU?

Photos: Harrisburg New Year's Eve celebration

Op-Ed: Raising Kane in Pennsylvania

About Us

PennLive
PA Media Group
Advertise with Us
Contact Us
Send us a news tip

Career Opportunities
FAQ
Community Rules

Subscriptions

The Patriot-News
e-Newsletters
Blogs

PennLive Sections

News
Business
Sports
High School Sports
Entertainment
Living
Travel
Opinion
Obituaries
Autos
Jobs
Real Estate
Rentals
Classifieds
Find n Save
Local Businesses

Mobile

Mobile Site | iPhone, Android Apps | Tablet Apps

More on PennLive

Forums
Videos
Photos
Interact with Us
Weather
Contests
Post a Job
Post a Free Classified Ad
Sell your Car
Sell/Rent your Home
Sitemap & Search

Follow Us

Twitter | Facebook | Google+